Mental health is affected by lack of sleep. ① When we don't get enough sleep, we're irritable. ② We lose our tempers easily and overreact to situations. ③ For example, a lot of car accidents are caused by young drivers. ④ In fact, experiments have shown that lack of sleep over a long period of time can cause a complete mental breakdown. When we get our proper rest, we're more alert and responsive. Our outlook is positive, and we're much easier to get along with.

問2

Staying in a hotel on vacation should be a relaxing and pleasant experience. If there are any problems with your room, however, it is important to speak up quickly to get the problem fixed. ① When you first arrive, inspect the room to check that nothing is broken and that the room has been cleaned. ② If you are not happy, contact the front desk first of all. ③ Ask if anyone stayed in a traditional Japanese inn or guest house. ④ In most cases, you will not need to change rooms. Housekeeping should be able to sort it out fairly quickly. Hotels want their guests to be happy and know that their reputation depends upon satisfied customers.

We tend to think of plants as the furniture of the natural world. ① They don't move, they don't make sounds. ② They don't seem to respond to anything — at least not very quickly. Grass doesn't cry when you cut it, flowers don't scream when they're picked. ③ But as is often the case, our human view of the world misses quite a lot. ④ Therefore, we should try to learn a lot about the world and then the universe. Plants talk to each other all the time. And the language is chemical. Over the years, scientists have reported that different types of plants, from trees to tomatoes, release compounds into the air to help neighboring plants.

C 次の会話は、英会話のクラブ活動で3人の高校生が「オリンピックはお金の無駄か」というトピックについて議論している場面の一部である。32 ~ 34 に入れるのに最も適当なものを、それぞれ下の①~④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

Keisuke: If we abolished the Olympics, a lot of extra money could be donated to child hunger, cancer cures, child hospitals and various charities. Think about the people in some regions, starving and living without proper housing. All charities struggle to raise money, yet we spend millions on a sporting event. Athletes may get publicity, but isn't saving lives more important? And let's not forget that the natural habitats of native animals are destroyed to build expensive stadiums and parking lots.

Hiroyuki: You are against the Olympic Games because you believe that 32, but I don't agree with you.

- ① all huge sporting events cause many animals to become extinct
- ② developed countries have earned too much money from the Olympics
- ③ most of the sponsorship money is donated to various institutes or charities
- ④ there are many other things that we should be spending money on

Keisuke: Don't you think that the Olympic Games are a waste of money?

Hiroyuki: Well, their purpose is not just to promote sport but also to bring happiness to the world. We need things to inspire us, to encourage us and to motivate us to dream. It's true that it is the government's primary duty to protect and improve the health of its people. But the term "health" means not only the physical well-being of individuals but also their emotional well-being, and the Olympic Games can contribute to both of them.

Miyuki: You think 33, right?

- ① those who oppose the Olympics are probably not emotionally satisfied
- ② we have to have a lot of motivation to keep fit
- ③ we should not abolish the Olympics, because they bring us joy
- ④ we should spend more money on making the Olympics more attractive

Hiroyuki: Yes, that's right. What do you think about this, Miyuki?

Miyuki: I don't think the Olympic Games are a waste of money, either. They bring the world together in a spirit of friendly competition. Much of the world focuses on the Olympics, not only during the games but also during the periods leading up to and just after them. Friendships developed at these times are invaluable in aiding our understanding of peoples and cultures that are different from our own.

Keisuke: You mean the Olympic Games

- ① can help people communicate with each other across cultures
- ② enable people to forget how miserable the world really is
- ③ provide a better world by bringing people a lot of money
- ④ should be criticized because people work together only during the competition

Miyuki: Yes, that's exactly what I mean.

第4問 次の問い(A・B)に答えよ。(配点 35)

- A 次の文章はある報告書の一部である。この文章とグラフを読み、下の問い(問1～4)の 35 ～ 38 に入れるのに最も適当なものを、それぞれ下の①～④のうちから一つずつ選べ。

Despite decreasing support for scholarships and tightening travel budgets, 4.1 million students left their home countries to pursue formal higher education at colleges and universities abroad in 2010. According to UNESCO, there were 177 million students enrolled in colleges and universities worldwide that year, an increase of 77 million students since 2000.

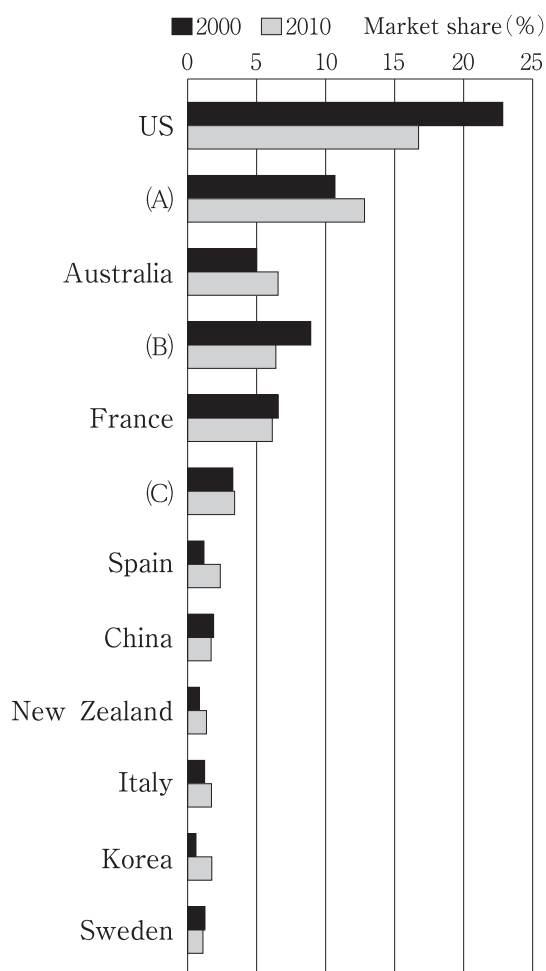

The US suffered a marked drop in the share of foreign students it received, though in absolute terms, the number of students increased from 475,000 in 2000 to 685,000 in 2010. Young scholars appear to prefer studying in English-speaking countries. Australia and the UK have the highest percentage of international students, and have seen noticeable increases in their popularity as educational destinations in the past decade. Non-English-speaking countries either suffered a great drop, like Germany, or managed to remain much the same, like France and Japan.

Tuition fees also play a large role in destination choices for foreign students: among most EU countries such as Italy and Spain, international students from other EU countries are treated as domestic students with respect to tuition fee charges, which are relatively low in these countries.

In Korea most international students pay tuition fees that are somewhat lower than those paid by domestic students. So it has become a more popular study abroad destination than Sweden or the Netherlands. Meanwhile, Korea joins China and India in boasting the largest numbers of students studying abroad.

Akiko

I visited Hong Kong a month ago with my husband and my son. My husband doesn't like going abroad, but this time he looked forward to the visit because his brother's family is living there. He is always saying that he wants our son to spend more time with his cousins, but actually that is difficult because they don't live in Japan.

It was our first trip abroad with our son. He is two years old now, and I was a little worried that he could not sit quietly on the airplane. Fortunately, that was a needless worry. He behaved himself during the flight because he enjoyed watching the movies and drinking a lot of juice.

What surprised me most when I got to Hong Kong was that there were so many high buildings which seemed to have over 100 stories. I truly felt that this city was bigger than Tokyo. Every night when the buildings were lit up, they were as beautiful as everyone had told me they were. I booked a hotel room from which you could see the "million-dollar view of Hong Kong," so we could enjoy the view every night.

In Hong Kong, Tomoko, who is my sister-in-law, showed us around. I was impressed that my son's cousins took good care of him and happy that he seemed to enjoy spending time with them. On one of the days we went to a theme park together. We saw pandas there for the first time and rode a very thrilling ropeway. The kids looked scared and didn't talk much while they were on it. Tomoko took us to a good Chinese restaurant and we tried famous Cantonese cuisine. The only thing I didn't get the chance to do was ride a famous double-decker tram. I wished we had had more time there.

Another surprising thing in Hong Kong was the way taxi drivers drove. It seemed that they always went over the speed limit, so I broke into a cold sweat again and again. Tomoko said she had already gotten used to their way of driving.

The trip to Hong Kong was really memorable thanks to Tomoko and her children. Unfortunately, we could not see my husband's brother because he was away on a business trip. I am looking forward to seeing all of them the next time they come back to Japan.

Tomoko

About a month ago, my brother-in-law and his family came to Hong Kong for vacation. Having guests from Japan always makes me happy because I don't have many Japanese friends here and I don't have a lot of chances to speak Japanese. But every time we have guests, I feel sorry for them because our apartment is so small that I have to ask them to make a hotel reservation. In addition, this time there was another thing I felt sorry about. My husband was away on a business trip, so he couldn't see his brother and family.

Akiko, who is my sister-in-law, gave us some very nice gifts; Japanese sweets and tsukudani. We can buy almost all Japanese food here but there are not so many kinds and they are relatively expensive. My children were happy and ate the sweets at once, and my husband enjoyed eating tsukudani over the next few weeks.

I took them to Ocean Park, where my kids and nephew had a fun time watching the pandas being fed. I heard that in Japan you have to wait in line to see pandas, but luckily for us, we don't have to wait here in Hong Kong. At the park I was very moved that my kids were so kind and gentle to their small cousin. They seemed to enjoy taking care of him, because they didn't want to get on any thrilling rides at all. For the first time, I seriously felt that my kids were growing up.

問 1 Akiko was surprised that

- ① buildings were lit up every night
- ② her brother-in-law was out of town
- ③ the ropeway was thrilling enough to scare the kids
- ④ the taxi drivers drove too fast

問 2 Tomoko felt sorry because

- ① Akiko had never seen a panda before
- ② Akiko was worried about her son during the flight
- ③ her kids didn't play with their cousin a lot
- ④ she couldn't let Akiko's family stay at her apartment

問 3 Which of the following is true?

44

- ① Akiko was happily surprised when she was served Japanese-style dishes in Hong Kong.
- ② Akiko's gifts delighted Tomoko's family because Japanese food is not available in Hong Kong.
- ③ In Hong Kong, Tomoko and her husband took their children and Akiko's family to a theme park.
- ④ In Hong Kong, you don't have to stand in line to see pandas in a theme park.

問 4 Both Akiko and Tomoko were impressed that 45.

- ① the brothers wanted to see each other often
- ② the children didn't want to get on any rides
- ③ the older kids took care of the youngest one
- ④ the view from the hotel room was amazing

第6問 次の文章を読み、下の問い(A・B)に答えよ。なお、文章の左にある(1)～(7)は段落の番号を表している。(配点 36)

(1) Whenever we're dealing with bad news, a difficult person, or a disappointment of some kind, most of us get into certain habits, ways of reacting to life — particularly bad luck — that don't serve us very well. We overreact, blow things out of proportion, hold on too tightly, and focus on the negative aspects of life. When we are troubled by little things — when we are irritated, annoyed, and easily bothered — our (over-)reactions not only make us frustrated but actually get in the way of getting what we want. We lose sight of the bigger picture, focus on the negative, and annoy other people who might otherwise help us. In short, we live our lives as if they were one great big emergency! We often rush around looking busy, trying to solve problems, but in reality, we are often making them worse. Because everything seems like such a big deal, we end up spending our lives dealing with one drama after another.

(2) Happily, there is another way to relate to life — a softer, more graceful path that makes life seem easier and the people in it more compatible. This “other way” of living involves replacing old habits of “reaction” with new habits of perspective. These new habits enable us to have richer, more satisfying lives.

(3) About a year ago a foreign publisher contacted me and requested that I attempt to get an *endorsement from the best-selling author Dr. Wayne Dyer for a foreign edition of my book You Can Feel Good Again. I told them that while Dr. Dyer had given me an endorsement for an earlier book, I had no idea whether or not he would consider doing so again. I told them, however, that I would try.

(4) As is often the case in the publishing world, I sent out my request, but did not hear back. After some time had gone by, I came to the conclusion that Dr. Dyer was either too busy or unwilling to write an endorsement. I honored this decision and let the publisher know that we wouldn't be able to use his name to promote the book. I considered the case closed.

- (5) About six months later, however, I received a copy of the foreign edition and to my surprise, right on the cover was the old endorsement for the earlier book from Dr. Dyer! Despite my specific instructions to the contrary, the foreign publisher had used his earlier quote and transferred it to the new book. I was extremely upset, and worried about the implications as well as the possible consequences. I called my literary agent, who immediately contacted the publisher and demanded that the books be taken off the shelves.
- (6) In the meantime, I decided to write Dr. Dyer an apology, explaining the situation and all that was being done to solve the problem. After a few weeks of wondering about what his response might be, I received a letter in the mail that said the following: "Richard. There are two rules for living in harmony. 1) Don't worry about small things and 2) They're all small things. Love, Wayne Dyer" That was it! No lectures, no threats. No hard feelings and no confrontation. Despite the obviously unacceptable use of his very famous name, he responded with grace and humility; no feathers ruffled. His response demonstrated the important concepts of "going with the flow," and of learning to respond to life gracefully, with ease.
- (7) I will share with you very specific strategies that will help you respond to life more gracefully. The strategies have proven themselves to be the most successful over the years. They also represent the very way I like to approach my own life: the path of least resistance. Each strategy is simple, yet powerful, and will act as a navigational guide to point you in the direction of greater perspective and more relaxed living. You'll find that many of the strategies will apply not only to everyday events but to many of life's most difficult challenges.
